Thank God for Bill Gates and Microsoft. I don't think the Government should have interfered in this matter at all. Look at where we are as a result of Microsoft Windows. We now can use computers easily. What a boost the computer industry has been to the economy for the last 10 years and that is all thanks to the ease in which the average person can use a computer. If someone can make a better operating system, then let them and if its good the public will use it; but I don't need the Government running interference on this one.

I can think of many more ways the Government can protect me. Try the banking industry and their unreasonable fees for ATM use or the oil industry that controls the prices of a commodity that I have to use daily! A computer is an option -- let the Government interfere and take action on the things in my life that are not optional!

I thought that we lived in a country that embraces capitalism and free enterprise and rewards people that are innovative -- I guess not in the case of Bill Gates!
